I am deeply passionate about Italian food and wine and believe that the diet and lifestyle of my homeland is the key to a long, healthy and prosperous life.

Italy is rich with natural beauty. The volcanic forces that shaped the peninsula and its islands have enriched the landscape. The soils are young and mineral rich, replenished regularly by active volcanoes, including Mt Vesuvius and Mt. Etna, the most active volcano in all of Europe.

The best, authentic Italian food is grown in these volcanic soils. This special environment gives Italian grown produce the incredible taste you don't get anywhere else in the world.

The Mediterranean Diet

The Mediterranean diet is based on the diets of people from Southern Italy. The diet focuses on whole grains, good fats (fish, olive oil, etc.), legumes, vegetables, fruits, and low consumption of any non-fish meat. This diet has become popular because individuals show:

- Lower rates of heart disease and chronic disease
- Improved weight loss, better control of blood sugar
- Reduced risk of depression and mental illness
- Reduced levels of inflammation, a risk factor for heart attack, stroke and Alzheimer's disease

However, following the diet is only one contributor to Mediterranean long living. The key to a longer, healthier life from the Mediterranean diet comes from the mineral rich volcanic soils in which the food is grown. These unique volcanic ecosystems have a profound beneficial impact on the produce grown and the people that call it home.

Our goal is to bring you exquisite elements of this amazing diet into your home, so you can not only enjoy the immaculate taste of Italian cuisine but also feel healthier, happier and fulfilled with the benefits of a Mediterranean diet in your lifestyle.

Why Volcanic Soil?

Contrary to popular belief, volcanic soils are not always easy to cultivate. The terrain is challenging and the nutrients of the rocky, mineral-dense soil are difficult to access for plants' root systems. Surviving and growing is a stressful experience.

It is this development under stress that may explain why the Mediterranean diet is famously linked to healthy living and a longer lifespan. Plants that are grown in volcanic soils are high in polyphenols, unique molecules produced by plants under stress. When animals or humans consume plants rich in these molecules, their stress-defense pathways are activated. This fortifies the body to protect against the stresses that lead to aging & disease.

This principle, that environmentally stressed plants produce molecules that confer stress resistance and survival benefits to animals that consume them, is known as xenohormesis.

By choosing our produce grown in the volcanic soils of Southern Italy, you are consuming foods rich in plant polyphenols. They are the secret to the health benefits of the Mediterranean diet and fantastic quality food, found nowhere else in the world. We have sourced the very best of these foods and beverages to bring these benefits and enjoyment to you.
